Moscow Courts Asians

Moscow courts are dealing with cases involving Asians. The cases involve various legal issues, including human rights and civil liberties. The courts are expected to make decisions on these cases.

U.S. Policy on Terror Lacks a Consensus

The U.S. policy on terrorism lacks a consensus. There are different views on how to deal with terrorism, and the government is struggling to reach a unified position. This lack of consensus may affect the effectiveness of U.S. policy.

Reagan Warns Terrorists About 'Cowardly Acts'

President Ronald Reagan has warned terrorists about their "cowardly acts." He has said that the United States will not tolerate terrorism and will take action against those who engage in such activities.

Raid Revives British Resentment of U.S. Muscle

A raid in London has revived British resentment of U.S. military power. The raid was seen as an overreaction by some in Britain, and it has led to a renewed discussion about the balance of power between the two countries.

U.S. Affection for Ally Swells

U.S. affection for its ally, Britain, is swelling. The two countries are working closely together on various issues, and the U.S. is providing more support to Britain. This relationship is seen as a key element of U.S. foreign policy.

BOMBING IN LYON

A bombing in Lyon, France, has caused significant damage. The explosion occurred in a crowded area, and several people were injured. The authorities are investigating the cause of the bombing.

European Court Is to Rule on Air Fares

The European Court is expected to rule on a case regarding air fares. The case involves a dispute between airlines and passengers over the pricing of flights. The court's decision will have a significant impact on the airline industry.

Sudan Ends 17 Years of Military Rule

Sudan has ended 17 years of military rule. A new civilian government has been formed, and the country is moving towards a more democratic system. This is a significant step for Sudan.

Moscow Acts to Win Friends in Asia, Dismisses U.S. Efforts as 'Militaristic'

Mr. Lee said he thought the Soviet presence in Asia was to exercise influence "to the maximum that they believe their built-up strength enables them to."

Diplomats say the new Soviet emphasis on trade and economic cooperation is an attempt to find different and more effective channels for their influence.

But they stress that the Soviet Union has a long way to go. The value of Soviet exports to ASEAN rose from $15 million in 1974 to $90 million in 1984. The value of imports from ASEAN to the Soviet Union in the same period increased from $340 million to about $900 million.

By contrast, two-way trade between the United States and 23 ASEAN nations reached $23.5 billion in 1985.

In U.S., Affection for Britain Swells

Britain Swells

Anyone passing by the receptionist at the British Consulate in Chicago can overhear the operator Christine Morris, answering call after call. "Yes," she says. "Well, thank you very much."

Caroline Cracroft, a vice consul, said: "People have been wiring flowers to the prime minister, and a group of Vietnam veterans want

MONTMARTRE - PLACE BLANCHE - (1) 46 06 00 19 ET AGENCES

This conference, organized in cooperation with the Greek government, will offer a unique opportunity to senior executives of both international and Greek companies to meet and question the policy-makers who directly influence their company's activities.

Key ministers will address the meeting and evaluate the effect of the various measures taken so far in this Government's second term of office on investment and trade in Greece. There will also be a panel discussion with senior executives from international banks and other companies active in Greece, giving their views on the new policies and the impact these have had on their activities. The program will include presentations by:

- Ms. Vasso Papandreou, Deputy Minister of Industry.
- Mr. Nikos Alkritis, Minister of Trade.
- Mr. Stelios Panagopoulos, Governor, National Bank of Greece.
- Mr. H.P. Goldfield, Assistant Secretary for Trade Development at the US Department of Commerce.

Simultaneous Greek-English translation will be provided at all times.

Senior executives wishing to register for the conference should complete and return the registration form below.

more than 75 million dollars, according to published estimates. Then Mr. McKinnon contacted David Bell, an independent geologist. They began trying to line up investors, finally reaching Murray Pezain, king of the Vancouver stock promoters.

"The Pez" as Mr. Pezain called himself, is renowned for his excesses and for his friendships with Las Vegas celebrities such as Joe Bishop. He is also known for his ability, proved hundreds of times, to arrange financing for oil and mineral exploration projects.

Mr. Pezain and his associate, Neil Dragovic, raised 750,000 dollars in a share offering. Using these funds, Mr. Bell started an exploration program in November 1980. His theory was based on the fact that the streams around Hemlo contain no gold nuggets and the massive rocks no veins of gold.

Mr. Bell assumed that if gold were instead found mixed in volcanic rock like sugar in a well-stirred cup of coffee — even if concentrations were less than those usually thought necessary — the deposit might be massive.

Early drilling supported Mr. Bell's theory, and in 1981 he recommended that Corona acquire two adjacent pieces of land — the property to the west owned by Mr. Williams, and a piece to the north held by Richard Hughes, a Vancouver businessman, and a partner.

Corona made a proposal to Mr. Hughes, but received no response. He and his partner had put together their own public offering of 200,000 shares, eventually giving Nevada bought 50 percent of the mine, which was the first of the three Hemlo operations to open.

Lac first became aware of Corona's drilling efforts from a field geologist in March 1981, who read a report in a Vancouver newsletter.

Deanna Sheehan, Lac's vice president of exploration, asked the geologist to arrange a visit to Corona, "with obvious possibilities of making a deal with them."

Sheehan, it concluded with the hope that the companies might "arrive at a sound basis for structuring a working agreement."

Mr. Bell's reply on May 22, "I do believe we should keep in touch and maintain the fine relationship presently established."

Indeed, the relationship was fine enough that on June 2, Mr. Sheehan and two other Lac officials published Corona stock. Corona at that time was clear evidence of a relationship. Lac said the amounts were too small to mean anything.

Meanwhile, Corona's drilling program was making progress. On May 29, the same newsletter that originally alerted Lac to Corona published the results of the 70th hole in Corona's exploration program. Only Corona and Lac knew that the results meant that Mr. Bell's theory was true, that Hemlo was one vast method.

The news was good enough to prompt Mr. Pezain to become a Corona director on June 1. Mrs. Williams did not testify. Nor could she be reached by phone. However, Mrs. Williams' initial response to Mr. McKinnon appears to have been positive.

Then, on July 3, Mr. Sheehan contacted Mrs. Williams and offered a separate deal. A brief deal was struck, and Mrs. Williams accepted Lac, perhaps because it had developed successful mines elsewhere. Mr. Pezain immediately contacted his lawyers.

Judge Holland ruled that although there was no binding contract between Lac and Corona, the seriousness of the negotiation meant they had a duty not to harm each other. Although he agreed with Lac that site visits are common and necessary in mining, he said that Lac had altered the obligations that such discussions entail. Had Lac not breached its confidence, the judge said Corona would have acquired the Williams property.

Lac's appeal is many-sided. Among other things, it alleges that the judge did nothing to ascertain how much of the supposedly confidential information was public, contending that almost all of it was spread out by Corona's publicity-hungry promoters.

A final irony: For all the talk of David slaying Goliath, Corona has a powerful partner in Teck Corp., even bigger than Lac. In late 1981, The Pez — severely hammered in the volatile stock market of the time — sold 55 percent of Corona to Teck for just 1 million dollars.

Now, Vancouver-based Teck stands to pocket half the jackpot.

Poll Finds Japan Firms Pessimistic on Dollar

TOKYO — One out of every three major Japanese companies expects the dollar to fall to 150 yen this year, a survey by the Kyodo News Service showed Saturday.

The survey covered 15 major companies in 11 leading industries, Kyodo said. The dollar closed at 169 yen in Tokyo on Friday.

U.S. Growth Seen At 2.9% This Year

APRIL 28 (AP) — Growth in the U.S. economy this year should be 2.9 percent, followed by 2.8 percent next year, according to a survey by the Conference Board, a private research agency.

The survey, released Friday, involved 27 financial directors of major corporations, only one of whom saw a recession on the horizon.

These interviewed expected inflation to average 4.1 percent in the next five years. They also thought that interest rates would remain fairly steady this year and next, with the banks' prime rate averaging 9 percent.

shoot, helping the Flames push Edmonton to the brink of elimination with a 4-1 victory over the defending National Hockey League champion Oilers.

Flames went into a defensive mode in the third period, checking fiercely to shut down repeated threats.

Edmonton's best chance in the final period came on two power-play opportunities, at 2:26 and 7:28.

The Flames took a 1-0 lead at 19:29 of a first period highlighted by outstanding goaltending at both ends.

Dan Quinn, who set out Game 3 and 4 in Calgary, scored the second goal of the playoffs on Calgary's scoring line.

Camelot's Whalen, 31, in Montreal, the Canadiens dominated the opening period for the fifth time in the five games played in the Adams Division.

McDonald broke a 1-1 tie at 12:25 of the second period, blasting a shot between Grant Fuhr's pads from the edge of the faceoff circle.

Boyd McDonald and goalie Fuhr were surprised. "I should've had my eye on the puck," Fuhr said.

Two goals in the third period, including a 4-1 lead, helped the Flames push Edmonton to the brink of elimination.

Hawks, Mavericks Advance; Rockets Win

PONTIAC, Michigan — Spud Webb was out for the playoffs last night. He played a key role in ending Detroit's season.

Webb sank a pair of free throws with two seconds left in the second overtime to help the Hawks defeat Detroit.

Alanta, which defeated Detroit by 3-1 in the first round, advanced to the second round.

Dallas eliminated Utah in the eighth of first-round games, won Saturday afternoon.

Webb, at 5-foot-7 (1.70 meter), the league's smallest player, was out by Detroit after a rookie camp injury.

"On the night, I wasn't nervous," said Webb, who finished with nine points.
